

Remote Education Provision in LIFE Education Trust Schools

To comply with the government's guidance of January 2021, all Trust schools have published a Remote Education Provision plan on their school websites.

In keeping with government and Trust guidance, each school's plan explains:

- exactly how remote learning will be delivered, including the digital platforms that will be used and how to access them
- who to contact if anyone encounters difficulties accessing digital learning
- how many hours pupils should spend on their learning each day and the expectations of what they should do
- that the curriculum that is delivered is the same as that which pupils would receive if they were to attend school
- that their remote education will be provided through a mixture of teaching and learning resources, including live and recorded input from class teachers and other sources, such as BBC Bitesize and the government-backed Oak National Academy
- that every child will have the opportunity to have live contact with their teacher at least once a day
